

Hamideh Sedghi is a political scientist interested in gender and Islam, Iran, international relations of the Middle East, and American foreign policy. As of Fall 2006, she will be at the Center for Middle Eastern Studies at Harvard University. A summary of her publications includes:

BOOKS:

Sedghi, Hamideh. WOMEN AND POLITICS IN IRAN: VEILING, UNVEILING AND REVEILING. Cambridge & New York: Cambridge University Press, forthcoming, 2007.

Sedghi, Hamideh, et. al., (eds.). Gender and Globalization. Work in Progress.

Sedghi, Hamideh, et. al., Christian Fundamentalism and Neoconservatism in the Making of American Foreign Policy in the Middle East, 2000-2008. Work in Progress.

SELECTED ARTICLES:

"Global Feminism, Local Agendas and Actions," Socialism and Democracy 19:2, (2005).
(link available for subscribers; search Socialism and Democracy site)

"Muslims in the West's Imagination: Myth or Reality?" Socialism And Democracy 16:1, (2002).

"Representation and Reality: Age and Gender in International Political Economy," in J. Smith (Ed.), Globalization and Gender Images. New York: United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs and the American Association of Retired Persons, 2000.

"Feminist Movements in the Pahlavi Period," in E. Yar-Shater (Ed.), Encyclopaedia Iranica. New York: Bibliotheca Persica, 1999.

"Gender and ageing: problems, perceptions and policies." Report prepared for the Secretary-General. United Nations Economic and Social Council. E/N.6/1999/3. New York, 1999.

"Women, the State, and Development: A Comparative Appraisal of Secular and Religious Gender Politics in Iran," in L. Lorentzen and J. Turpin (Eds.), *The Gendered New World Order: Militarism, Development, and the Environment*. New York, New York: Routledge, 1996.

"Third World Women's Perspectives on World Politics," in F. D'Amico and P. Beckman (Eds.), *Women, Gender and World Politics*. Amherst, Massachusetts: Bergin and Garvey, 1994. Reviewed by V. Spike Peterson in American Political Science Review 89:3, (1994).

"The Persian Gulf War: The New International Order or Disorder?"
New Political Science 21 & 22, (1992).

"Women in the International Economy," (Editorial Collective), Special Issue, The Review of Radical Political Economics 23:3 & 4, (1992).

"In Memory of Christian Bay: The Scholar and Activist," New Political Science 20,(1991).